Overview

The World Communion Scholarship Program is designed to enable the educational preparation of church and community leaders around the world so that they may serve in the mission of their churches and societies upon completion of their studies. This is done through providing financial support to students in their graduate-level studies at universities or seminaries. World Communion Scholarship recipients should have the probability of offering 5 years of service to their churches and/or communities. The objective of funding these individuals is to support the preparation of students who will work in the furtherance of Christian mission. Areas of mission prioritized are: elimination of poverty, expansion of global health, and leadership and congregational development.

The World Communion Scholarship Program is highly selective with approximately 5-10 new national (U.S.) recipients each year. The scholarship range is from approximately $250 – $12,500, depending on the student's related needs and the school expenses. The specific financial request must be substantiated by an official school budget.

Please note that a scholarship award is for the acquisition of only one degree, and that submission of an application does not guarantee a scholarship award. Students will be notified in writing in May/June as to the outcome of the application process.
